FOR ALL WHO DIE.

The following poem was regarded by Edgar Poe as the most beautiful and touching of any kind in our language. A correspondent in an exchange says the author was Mrs. Lewis:

It hath been said for all who die
There is a tear,
Some pining, bleeding heart to sigh
O'er every grave;
But in that hour of pain and dread
Who will draw near
Around my humble couch and shed
One farewell tear?

Who'll watch the fast departing ray
In deep despair,
And soothe the spirit on its way
With holy prayer?
What mournful words my couch will come
In words of woe,
And follow me to my long home
Solemn and slow?

When lying on my earthly bed
In lonely sleep,
Who then by pure affection led
Will come and weep?
By the pale moon, o'er the rose
Upon my breast,
And bid it cheer my dark repose,
My lonely rest?

Could I but know when I was sleeping
Low in the ground,
One faithful heart would be keeping
Watch all around,
As if some gem lay 'neath the sod,
That cold and gloom,
T'would mitigate the pains of death
And light the tomb.

Yes, in that hour if I could feel
From hells of grief
And beauty's pressure one would steal
In secret,
And come and sit or stand by me
In night's deep noon,
Oh, I would ask of memory
No other boon.

But ah, a lonelier fate is mine,
A deeper woe,
From all I've loved in youth's sweet time
I soon must go,
Draw round me my pale robes of white,
It is a dark and dreary night,
To sleep thro' death's long, dreamless night,
Lone and forgot.

CHAPTER XXII.—CONTINUED.

So it was decided to sell the calves and buy the lumber for an addition to the shanty, and the next day John Parsons took them over to Mr. Meeker and got the money for them.

On the way home he stopped at another neighbor's and borrowed a heavy wagon, and the day following started to town bright and early with the letter to Erastus still carefully concealed in his inside pocket.

"Bet that'll fetch him home on a run," he mused as he dropped it into the office at the landing just in time to have it get into the mail bag as it was being got ready for the down boat. "He'll be here in a week of that letter goes straight, or else he ain't as good as takin' a hint as I think he is."

Mrs. Parsons noticed that her husband was unusually jolly that night when he returned home, and all the next day and the days that followed after it.

He had always tried to appear cheerful in the presence of his family, and had never failed to respond to any effort of Johnny's to get up a laugh, though it often caused him an effort to do so; but on this particular evening, although it was late and he must have been tired, he really felt jolly, and he joked Lucy about one of the clerks at the store, where she and her mother had traded when in town, and also about a neighbor's son, who had shown a disposition to seek her society, but who, not receiving any encouragement, had decided that she was "stuck up," and so informed the other young people of his acquaintance.

The letter was three days in reaching its destination, and then lay in the post-office several days more before being called for.

Erastus had no correspondents other than the members of Mr. Parsons' family; and as there had been little that was pleasant to write about on either side, letters had not been frequent between them of late, and the young man seldom went to the post-office.

One day as he was working with several of his neighbors upon a ditch which was to be the means of irrigating their claims, another neighbor, who had been to town, rode up and, stopping his horse, called out:

"Here, Hemmingway; here's a letter for you."

Erastus was in his shirt sleeves in the ditch, shoveling, and the horseman leaned from his saddle and handed him the letter.

"If that's from your girl, she don't write a very pretty hand," he said, with a wink at the other ditchers, who had stopped work and stood leaning on their spades.

Glancing at the superscription, Erastus saw that it was in a strange hand. The post mark, however, proclaimed it to be from Phippsburg, and his first thought was that something terrible had again happened to Uncle John and his family—that they were all dead, may be, and a stranger had written to inform him.

Hastily tearing off the envelope, he looked at the signature and saw the name, "John Parsons." In stiff, awkward letters, at the bottom of the page, and it flashed over him that Lucy was married and that Uncle John had written to tell him of it because no one else liked to do so, and the blood rushed to his heart, which beat so that it seemed his companions must hear it.

But no; the letter said: "Lucy and her mother had gone to town." Then she was not married yet. The blood began to return to its proper channels.

"Lucy has given Annelsey his walkin' papers."

Could it be possible that she was not going to marry the New Yorker after all?

And if not, what then? The letter seemed plain enough to be understood without possibility of mistake, yet he read it the second time before its full import came to him, and then the blood rushed to his heart even more violently than before.

"Lucy might be his yet—that is what Uncle John meant," he said to himself. "If she had not loved some one else better she would not have dismissed Annelsey." And "she did not encourage any of the young men there"—that was what the letter said, and it said he was to come at once.

He had climbed out of the ditch and was brushing the dirt from his overalls with his hands.

"Mr. Johnson," he said, addressing the neighbor with whom he boarded, "will you let me have your roan horse for a couple of weeks and use my colts while I'm gone? I'm going home and want to make the trip as quickly as possible, and neither of the colts can stand a hard jaunt under the saddle very well. I'll take good care of the roan and promise not to hurt him. If I do you may take your choice of the colts to pay the damage."

"What's up?" "Folks sick?" "Why don't you go to 'Frisco and take the steamer?" came from one and another of the crowd.

"The fact is," replied Erastus, with his usual straightforward honesty, "I have not got money enough. You fellows know how it is yourselves. Money don't grow on these sand ridges until they are irrigated; and I can ride through in four days by traveling late and early and resting in the hottest part of the day, and not hurt the horse a bit if Mr. Johnson will let me have him, and it won't cost half as much as it will to go by the cars and boat."

"You can have the horse if you want him," replied Mr. Johnson. "I know you won't hurt him; but you haven't told us yet who is sick or dead."

"There's no one sick or dead, boys; but I'm going, and going to start to-night."

"Girl run away with another fellow?" asked one of the men, with a grin. "No, my girl hasn't run away with another fellow," replied the young man, with a laugh that some way reminded him of what he had often called the "giggling" of the girls.

How could he help it when reminded so forcibly of what, up to the moment, he hardly realized; that instead of running away with another fellow as he had expected her to do, his girl had dismissed the other fellow because of her love for him.

The rough, hoarse-sounding irresistibly funny, and withal brought such a delightfully warm feeling to his heart that it is no wonder he laughed, or that the laugh was just a trifle hysterical.

What a terrible mistake there had been. What a wretch he was for not having spoken up when Annelsey first came courting Lucy, and so have saved all this suffering.

How tender his heart grew, thinking of her who had suffered so—who must have suffered so terribly all this time.

Such were the thoughts that passed through the young man's mind as he walked rapidly towards his boarding place.

But what if Uncle John was mistaken?

He was half-way to the house when this thought came to him, and he stopped and stood perfectly still for some seconds, but not stiller than his heart seemed to have become.

"At any rate I'll know the truth," he said aloud, and then mentally: "I played the coward once, I'll not do it again. Uncle John certainly meant me to understand that Lucy loved me well enough to be my wife, and I would be a craven indeed not to ask herself now."

Going directly to the shed where the roan horse stood, he groomed him carefully, then went to the house and to the low room up-stairs where he slept.

Here he bathed and changed into his best suit, being careful to see that the few dollars in money which he possessed were in his pocket-book and in his pocket.

Meantime Mr. Johnson had left the ditch and gone to the little patch of ground a quarter of a mile away, which his wife cultivated as a garden, where he knew her to be at work.

When told that Erastus was going on a visit to his old home and would start at once, Mrs. Johnson hurried to the house and began preparing a meal before he should go.

Neither of them asked the young man any questions as to the cause of his sudden going, but both guessed that it was in some way connected with a love affair and were anxious to assist him in every way possible. Mr. Johnson offered to loan him all the money he had, which was less than two dollars, and Mrs. Johnson fluttered around, trying to get something a little extra for him to eat, helping him with his necktie, and offering to do a dozen other things as if he had suddenly become a child, or what appeared more likely—was going to see his sweetheart, if not, indeed, to get married. And all the time she was trying not to say anything that would show how very anxious she was to have him confide in her yet hoping greatly that he would do so.

Erastus, in the first flush of his newfound joy, was only restrained from showing Mr. Parsons' letter and making a clean breast of the whole affair by a lingering fear that Uncle John might be mistaken.

It was really very hard for him to keep from telling. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were the best friends he had here at the Slough, and he knew they thought a good deal of him, and he wanted to tell them what a lovely girl Lucy was, but could not quite bring himself to do so even when Mrs. Johnson remarked, as she fixed his necktie, that she "supposed he would soon have some one else to do it for him now," and so he left them wholly in doubt, and mounting the roan, rode away in the direction of the foot-hills of the Sierras.

He curbed his own impatience and the desire of the spirited roan at the start, well knowing that time would be lost and not gained by fast riding for the first hour or two.

The sun had long since set, when, having put thirty-five miles between himself and his starting-place, he dismounted, tethered his animal in a spot of wild oats a little off the road, rubbed him down with dry leaves and grass, and rolling himself in a blanket lay down upon the ground.

If his body was weary he was not aware of it, for his heart was filled with the sweetest hopes; and what sustains the physical powers like hope?

As he lay looking up at the stars, and watching the full moon coming slowly up from behind the distant hills and climbing a sky that had not known a cloud for weeks and weeks, he recalled every incident of his life from the time when Mr. and Mrs. Parsons had taken him, a poor, outcast boy, to their home and their hearts.

He thought upon every act of Lucy's which appeared in any degree to indicate her feelings toward himself, and tried to place one against another, the unfavorable against the favorable, in such a way as to enable him to strike a balance and determine just what his chances were. But in this he was conscious of failing, for there were many little instances—acts or words—the meaning of which he was utterly unable to determine, which he yet felt certain had a meaning if only he knew upon which side of his love account to place them. Besides, it was so very pleasant to fancy that the favorable ones outnumbered the others, if indeed there were any others, that he could not avoid going off into blissful waking dreams of the future, when he should have got his place at the Slough irrigated, and set in fruits, and have a cottage built.

He would have a cottage just like the one in the foot-hills, where they had all spent so many pleasant days, he thought; the cottage now abandoned and going to decay. Lucy would be by his side always, and Uncle John and Aunt Martha should bring Johnny and live with them, their honored and beloved guests, and all the misadventures and sufferings of the past should be forgotten.

And thus he lay and drew bright pictures of sweet days to come, until from waking dreams he passed to dreams which came in sleep, but they did not greatly differ from each other; the music and the words were just the same—were love and Lucy; love and Lucy.

Although the sun was not yet up, there was no dew upon his blanket or in his hair when he awoke in the morning; for dew seldom falls in this portion of California during the dry season.

The roan horse had risen from his bed in the tall oats, and had stretched himself and begun again to eat of the rich herbage.

Erastus led him to drink at a creek which they had crossed but a little way back the night before, again rubbed him down, and leaving him eating, walked to a rancher's shanty, a quarter of a mile away, in quest of his own breakfast.

He found the family just sitting down to their own meal, explained to them that he had ridden late the night before and had camped out, and was given a cordial invitation to "draw a chair up to the table and help himself," which he very promptly did.

Breakfast eaten, he offered to pay, but was refused; gave thanks instead of money, and hurrying back to the place where he had left his horse, fastened his blanket to his saddle, placed both upon the roan, and mounting, resumed his journey.

Just before noon he stopped at a little town, put up at the hotel, fed and rubbed down his steed, got his own dinner, and did not mount again until the greatest heat of the day was over. Then he pushed on at a rapid pace until an hour after sunset, when he again tethered his horse and slept upon the ground, as he had done the night before.

The day following was a repetition of the one which preceded it, but its close found him well up in the foot-hills, and he put up at the cottage of a rancher, with whom he had stayed over night when on his way to the Slough the year before.

In the morning he arose with one thought throbbing in brain and heart, "to-night I shall see her; to-night I shall know my fate."

He fed and groomed his horse as usual, but could scarcely wait for breakfast, which was not yet prepared when he returned from the stable. He had eaten a cold lunch for supper, but his impatience conquered all desire for food. He was counting the hours now, and the moments would drag them selves so until he was in the saddle again.

Rather than appear discourteous or strange, he waited for the morning meal to be prepared, but was off almost before his host had arisen from the table.

He had ridden seventy-five miles the day before, and had feared the roan might feel a little stiff and sore at starting, but when he saw him come out of the stable with head up, apparently as anxious as himself to be off, this fear vanished, and he determined to push through the remaining forty miles without halting. But he found the roads not so good as he had anticipated.

He was now in a part of the foot-hills with which he was unacquainted, for he no longer followed the road over which he came the year before, but struck across the country by a route which led the old horse off to the left, and threw him further up towards the mountains, and when noon came he was still, from the best information he could get, fully fifteen miles from John Parsons' shanty, and compassion for his horse induced him to stop at a rancher's for feed and rest; so that with this delay and the trouble which he experienced in learning exactly where the shanty was, even when within a few miles of it, the afternoon was well gone away when he reached the point where the by-road which led to it turned off from the main track; and even then he was not certain of this being the place.

He had stopped his horse and was debating with himself whether to turn off or follow the main road yet further, when he saw coming around the spur of the mountain, and into the road over which he had just passed, her for love of whom he had come, and the right sent all the blood in his body surging to his heart, and for the moment he could neither have spoken nor moved.

Evidently Lucy had not seen him pass, and was not now aware of his presence.

She had gone to find the cows and drive them home to be milked, and was following along behind them as they lazily moved homeward.

She was dressed as Erastus had seen her oftenest in the old time, in a light print dress and sun-bonnet. In her hand she carried a little crooked stick, which she had picked up to drive the cows with, but was paying very little attention to them. Instead she was gazing, off upon the hills which stretched away and away, one above another, until they became snow-capped peaks that in the light of the falling sun looked like amethysts set into the cerulean blue of the heavens.

Had not the cows paused at sight of the man and horse standing in their path she might have reached his side before becoming aware of his presence, but when the cows stopped and stood with their great eyes staring with the least bit of surprise at what was not a very common sight to them in their mountain pastures, she raised her stick and bid them "go-long." Then seeing for the first time a gentleman standing by the roadside holding his horse by the bridle, she blushed a little beneath her sun-bonnet, and dropping her eyes, followed closely after the cows, which had again lazily taken up their line of march.

The blush which suffused her cheeks was not, however, owing to her having recognized the horseman, for she had not done so. She had only glanced at him and then dropped her eyes with a feeling of embarrassment, for she seldom met gentlemen now, and however much poets may sing the charms of milkmaids in calico dresses, they will never be able to convince any member of the sex that they look their best in that role, any more than can be taken from them their womanly desire to appear well in the eyes of the opposite sex, even though he be an entire stranger, as she supposed this one to be who stood waiting for her approach, presumably that he might inquire the way to some neighboring rancher's shanty, or possibly if her parents would entertain him for the night.

When within a few paces she raised her eyes and turned her face towards him.

As she did so he spoke her name and took a step towards her.

"Lucy!"

She stopped suddenly and the little crooked stick fell to the ground while both hands went to her face pushing back the sun-bonnet.

"Lucy, don't you know me? I've come all the way back to see you; started the moment I got your father's letter—that is the most I learned you were not going to marry Mr. Annelsey. I love you, Lucy—love you better than any body or anything in all the world. I have always loved you ever since we were children together, and I want you to be my wife."

And she only said: "Oh—Ras!" and put her hands to her face and began to cry.

"Lucy, Lucy, can't you love me?" pleaded her lover. "I know I am not rich like Mr. Ras, but I'll love you always, love you better, it seems to me, than anybody else can love you. Can't you love me, Lucy?"

She put out one little sunburned hand and laid it on his arm. With the other she continued to hide her face.

"Oh, 'Ras,' she sobbed. "I—I do love you; I always did, but I thought father was wanted me to marry him, and that you loved Julia Ennis, and then I didn't care. Oh, 'Ras,' I'm so glad you've come."

And she buried her face on his shoulder.

The records that remain to us of the history, the conditions of life and the customs of the aboriginal possessors of the soil of Illinois are found mainly in the pages of the Colonial chroniclers of the Eighteenth Century. These Indians and their country were under the French dominion. The region now included within the limits of Illinois formed part of that vast colonial possession of France called in those days Louisiana.—Chicago Journal.

THE COMMON WEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

For Burley tobacco the week's trade has not been marked by any wide variation in price, but the buying limits have been comparatively narrow, and a material decline has been avoided only by reducing the privilege of rejections. Dark and heavy styles have been brisk and strong throughout the week, with a positive but mild tendency in regie leaf and in lugs in favor of sellers. Low grades of dark lugs continue in neglect. Green River fillers and German Wrappers have not figured on the breaks. Tobacco has been injured somewhat, both on scaffold and on the hills, the latter by tending to renew the sap flow and retard ripening. It may add something to the crop of suckers. There will be much anxiety in some sections lest the rains give way to frost, and as to this the outlook is more threatening recently than at any previous time this fall. We quote 1884 tobacco as follows for full-weight packages:

	Dark and Heavy.	Burley.
Trash	$3 75 4 00	$3 75 4 00
Common lugs	4 25 4 50	4 25 4 50
Medium lugs	5 00 5 50	5 00 5 50
Good lugs	5 75 6 25	5 75 6 25

NATURAL GAS.

Its Fatal Work in a Pennsylvania Town.

Three Men Burned in a Pit.—The Flesh Peels Off in Quivering Flakes.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., October 11.—By an explosion of natural gas in a pit at Godfrey & Clarke's paper factory, Tarentum, Pa., this afternoon, three men—Geo. Headin, William Garlich and Samuel Thomson—were seriously and probably fatally injured. The accident was caused by a leakage in the pipes, which flared every crevice in the pit with the odorless gas. The men not being aware of the presence of the gas, went down into the pit to oil the pump, taking with them a small lamp. As soon as they reached the bottom the gas ignited from the lamp and in an instant the pit was filled with a belching sheet of flame. The report was not loud and the fire was out almost as sudden as it came, but it left the three men lying on their backs, terribly burned about the face, arms and limbs. They were removed to their homes, where an examination of their injuries showed them all to be in a serious condition, the flesh falling off their bodies in large flakes. They are resting quite easy tonight, but it is feared they inhaled the gas, in which case death is almost inevitable.

BLOWN UP.

Flood Rock, the Key of Hell Gate, Shattered by Explosives.

NEW YORK, October 10.—Two hundred and eighty pounds of dynamite and rock were discharged under Flood Rock, in Hell Gate, to-day, and Flood Rock is no more. It was a very successful operation from start to finish. It drew crowds to every available point of view, such as are rarely seen, even in New York. The waters around were gay with hundreds of craft of every kind that float in these parts. Men of science took observations from a score of vantage points, photographers took instantaneous views, and hundreds of engineers from all parts of the country witnessed the explosion and marveled at the magnitude of the event. The work has been in progress for nine years.

NEW YORK, October 11.—A large number of people visited the scene of yesterday's explosion at Hell Gate to-day, and carried off mementoes of the occasion. The northern end of the reef still projects from the water at high tide, but the officer in charge declares the explosion a complete success. He says that the preceding portion is so heavily combed with fissures that it will fall to pieces when operations are begun for its removal. To a casual observer, however, the appearance of the system of surface fissures will be resorted to.

Woodard's Terrible Mistake.

CHATTANOOGA, October 11.—A shocking tragedy occurred last night at Livingston, Ala. Mr. Wm. Eastland, a prominent citizen, was awakened during the night by a noise near his premises. Having been assured that his house would be burned, he suspected that the effort would be made, and hastily sent his wife and child to the mill while he hid in the woods for the incendiaries. Nearly an hour passed and no sound was heard. His wife, fearing he had not yet returned, returned to the house, and was mistaken for one of the incendiaries by her husband, who shot her as she approached, causing her instant death.

A Father's Unnatural Crime.

UTICA, N. Y., October 11.—A horrible crime which was committed last February has just come to light. Patrick E. Brennan, of this city, is the father of four children, the oldest of whom is a girl of eighteen. Mrs. Brennan is an inmate of the lunatic asylum. Last February Brennan went to his daughter's room and forced her to yield to his inhuman desires. The girl, fearing the wrath of her father, kept the awful secret. On February 22 of this year she gave birth to a boy, who is now alive. Brennan was arrested yesterday, and was arraigned and held to await the action of the grand jury.

Submerged by a Tidal Wave.

SAVANNAH, Ga., October 11.—A strong northeast gale which has been blowing all day caused a tidal wave in the Savannah River at noon, and another at 10 o'clock to-night. The rice plantations are all submerged. The banks are badly broken and the crop is all under water. The loss is estimated at from sixty to seventy-five per cent. Hutchinson Island, opposite Savannah, is inundated, and all the residents came over to the city at night. The rice crop along the Ogeechee and Satilla Rivers is also damaged, and many fields will be a total loss.

Heavy Safe Burglary.

VASSAR, Mich., October 11.—The store of John G. Huebinger, at Frankenmuth, Saginaw County, was entered last night by burglars, who blew open the safe and carried away $75 in money, and $1,500 in town orders and drafts on New York, Chicago, and Detroit to a large sum. Not satisfied with this, they stole a valuable span of horses, and left their own worn out animal in its place. No clue has been discovered to the burglars. Huebinger owns a store and flouring-mill, his buildings being isolated, and there being no watchman.

be accused of writing in the interest of any candidate.

Many of the acts of our County Court have been characterized by a penny wise, pound foolish idea, and they have been followed by the usual results—disaster to the county. We hope that in the important matter of taking care of the unfortunate poor of the county no such folly will be shown. We know of men who in times past essayed to be Poor House keepers, and they succeeded admirably, for poorer houses never disgraced any State or county. These men obtained their position through influence with the justices, promising and actually giving bond that they would properly care for the paupers committed to their care. How faithfully they discharged their trust is best known to the poor devils who froze and starved while in their keeping.

In appointing a keeper for our new Almshouse a man should be chosen who has a practical knowledge of the business. We do not mean by this that he must have been a poor house keeper, but he should know how to feed and care
for those entrusted to his charge.
He should be able to well discriminate between the sick and the well
in order that he be not imposed upon by those who attempt to palm off laziness for illness. Our justices should know very nearly what,
at the ruling prices of provisions,
it should cost to keep a pauper a week, and when any bid is below
this amount it should be regarded with suspicion. Allow your keeper a living price for his services, require of him a sufficient bond, and above all, make him fulfill its requirements.

The house erected by the County
for an Almshouse is a good one,
the location is fair, and it is the imperative duty of the Court to see that none but a thoroughly competent man is placed in charge.

What the Kentucky New Era says of Christian co. is applicable to many portions of the State: "The amount of crime in our vicinity
and in neighboring counties demonstrates that energetic measures of reform must be inaugurated. There needs be more successful prosecution of criminals, more penalties attached to crime and less slush
and sentiment over pathetic, deplorable unfortunates who beg pardon
to gain time for further misdemeanors."

If You Want to be Happy.

If you want to be happy you must be good,
A maxim all right in its way;
But a far better one, if understood,
Is I have now got to say.

If you want to be happy you must be well,
Whatever the station you serve in;
And of all the medicines one bears the lead,
The good SAMARITAN NERVEINE.

I once tried every cure,
To restore me good health
And spent in vain, of that I am sure,
Considerable share of wealth;

But all was vain, till a friend advised
In a manner
The medicine he most highly prized,
RICHMOND'S SAMARITAN NERVEINE.

I took his advice; in one short week,
I felt no further pain;
For doctors no longer I had to seek,
For I never felt sick again.

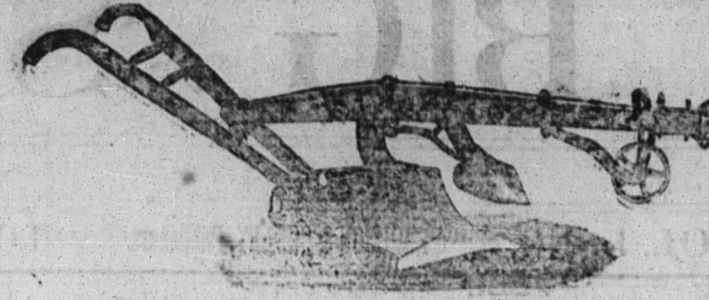

I'm healthy and happy the whole day long;
So if health be worth preservin',
The constant burden of my song
Is, try Samaritan Nerveine.

"T will cure the young, 't will heal the old,
'T will make the whole world better;
At St. Joseph, Missouri, the medicine is sold drop Dr. Richmond a letter; He'll point out the way to preserve in
The best condition your newly found health,
By the use of Samaritan Nerveine.

MANHOOD! WOMANHOOD!
An exhaustive treatise on Sexual Excesses, the diseases arising from them, and their treatment and cure; also a brief lecture on Epilepsy and other Nervous Diseases, showing the relationship existing between the Sexual and Nervous System. By Dr. S. A. Richmond, St.
Joseph, Missouri. Price, 1.50. Fully illustrated and elegantly bound, containing over 250 pages.

This wonderful book reveals the inner-most secrets of nature, and is, in fact, a key which opens the book of knowledge, and plucks leaves of healing from the tree of life. It treats of subjects which are of immense value to every man, woman and child in the land, and will, in probability, save years of sickness and troubles in doctor bills. Agents wanted

OHIO ELECTION.

As we go to press the result of the Ohio election is doubtful, but the probabilities are that the Republicans have carried the State.
We will trot out our Cock some other time.

Rev. C. H. Williamson, of the M.
E. Church, has been appointed by his Conference to West Covington.
Mr. Williamson has served his church and the people generally here very acceptably, and they part with him with regret. He is an earnest christian, a gentleman and a scholar. We wish him great success in his new field of labor.

Rev. H. M. Smith, of Louisa, joined the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church South during the late session at Ashland, and was sent to Roane C. H. W. Ya. We learn that the place is a good one,
and we hope our friend will find the first and all succeeding years of his ministry the best years of his life, and that those to whom he is sent will receive him with kindness and be better for his coming.

The following are the appointments made by the West Virginia
Conference of the M. E. Church
South, for the Catlettsburg District:
Catlettsburg District, S. F. McClung,
P. E.; Catlettsburg, J. H. Jackson;
Louisa, J. M. Lauck; Big Sandy,
J. D. Garrett; Blaine, R. F. Rice;
Ashland, W. E. Boggs; Greenup
and Grayson, S. T. Malloy; Little Sandy, I. F. McKinstor and O. H.
Patterson; Martinsburg, J. C. Todd; Paintsville, J. T. Johnson; Pres-
tonsburg, G. M. F. Hampton; Pikeville, Wm. Wells; Eden, Cephaniah Meek. The next session of the Conference will be held at Charleston,
W. Va.

It will be seen by reference to the articles of incorporation published elsewhere in this paper that an organization known as the Louisa Fire Company has been formed in this place. The movement is an excellent one, one which should receive the substantial aid and support not only of the Board of Trustees but of the citizens generally.
As matters now are we are at the mercy of the incendiary, and in view of recent events in Cassville
we know not how soon the torch may be applied in Louisa. Defenceless as we are now a fire in almost any part of this town would prove our ruin. We should therefore encourage any movement
which has for its object our protection from fire.

The general dullness and utter dreariness of the 11th day of October, 1885, were agreeably lightened and brightened by a society affair which culminated at the residence of Mr. R. F. Vinson. It was no less than the marriage of his second daughter, Jennie, to Mr. Arnoldus J. Garred, the popular clerk of the Lawrence Circuit and Criminal Courts. The bride is well known in a large circle of friends and relatives as a young lady of education, refinement and all those graces of person and manner which constitute genuine feminine worth. The gentleman who is so fortunate as to become her wooer and winner is too well known on account of his sterling worth and character, and because of the position he worthily fills, to require introduction or commendation from us.

The ceremony was impressively performed by Elder J. F. Medley, of the M. E. Church South, who married the bride's parents, after which the guests sat down to an elegant dinner.

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs.
Garred took the North bound Chattanooga train, enroute for the principal cities of the East. They were the recipients of many elegant presents, among which we note the following:

Solitaire diamond ring, the gift
of the groom; silver sugar bowl, Cok. and Mrs. Kortup; silver spoon-holder, Mr. and Mrs. Lackey and Miss Quinn; plush and crystal odor case, Mrs. Abbie Senger; glass and silver pickle dish, little Ninnie Garred.

Fortunately we have not had many accidents to chronicle since we began to publish our paper, but one occurred yesterday which,
while it was not attended by very serious results, might have been much worse. A gentleman whose name is withheld at his request, was driving down Madison street in his buggy, accompanied by his wife.
Just as they got opposite the large establishment of James A. Hughes & Co. the prices tumbled down with such a noise that the horse took fright and dashed madly down the street. When in front of Will Hutchison's place a big bargain was right in the way, causing the animal to stumble and fall. This caused the buggy to upset, spilling the occupants all over the street. The gentleman, who was much bruised, was carried to Weis' Drug Store and his wife was assisted to Rempy's Restaurant. A dozen stewed soon replied her. As soon as the gentleman was able to walk he inquired
the way to the store of C. D. Norris & Co., where he, too, refreshed himself with Oysters, 'Am and Heggis and Celery. Finding that his clothes were much the worse for his contact with the street he bought a stylish suit from A. J. Loar & Co., and soothed his wife by the purchase of an elegant stove from the hardware store of Snyder Bros. After finding out at Leo Frank's Barzar what a Hop-doo he he complained of feeling much better. He says if he brings suit for damages he will call on Alexander Lapkey, Attorney at Law.

Articles of Incorporation of the Louisa Fire Company.

Taking for our motto "That early and provident fear is the mother of safety." We the undersigned have this the 8th day of October 1885, voluntarily associated ourselves together for the purpose of forming an organization which shall be known as the LOUISA FIRE COMPANY, and we hereby certify:

FIRST—That the sole object of this organization is for the protection of our town against the ravages of fire which are so often detrimental to both life and property,
and it will be our purpose in the future to render material aid at all fires occurring within the corporate limits of the town of Louisa, such as can only be effected through a well organized and disciplined fire company.

SECOND—That this organization is to be effected now and carried on in the future, without one iota of cost, either to the town of Louisa or any citizens thereof other than the actual necessary equipage, such as ladders, buckets, axes and etc, the cost of which, when contrasted with the issues of a single fire dwindle into a mere pittance.

THIRD—That the outfit of this organization is to be the property of the town and not of the organization.

FOURTH—That the number of officers of the organization shall be three, viz: President, Secretary and Treasurer, the duties of which are those usually obligatory upon such officers in like organization.

After reading and adopting the above articles of incorporation
the following officers were elected for one year, viz: R. C. McClure President; L. B. Ferguson, Secretary;
and W. N. Sullivan, Treasurer.
After which the Company adjourned to meet Thursday evening October 15th.

IN ETERNITY.

Death of Cardinal John McCloskey

Peaceful Close of a Fruitful Life—His Career.

New York, October 10.—Cardinal McCloskey died at ten minutes to one o'clock this morning. Vicar General Preston, Father Daubross and members of the Cardinal's household were at his bedside. He died without a struggle. He was unable to recognize his most intimate friends when Dr. Keyes called at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon. He became unconscious at four o'clock, and so remained until his death.

HIS CAREER.

Cardinal McCloskey was born in Brooklyn in 1810. He was sent to the Church schools in New York City where he was distinguished as an apt scholar, until he was fitted for Mount St. Mary's College, Maryland. At college he showed a decided aptitude for the study that distinguished him in after life. He was a close, industrious student; possessed a clear, logical, and masterly, every obstacle in his course. He was graduated in the college course with distinction, and immediately entered upon the theological course in the same institution. On January 9, 1834, in his twenty-fifth year, he was ordained to the priesthood in St. Patrick's Cathedral in the same street, New York City. Bishop Dubois. The Bishop had taken a warm interest in the promising young student, and suggested that he study abroad for a time. In accordance with this advice, Father McCloskey went to Rome, where he attended lectures for two years. Then he spent a year in France. Upon his return to America he became pastor of St. Joseph's Church. In 1841 Bishop Hughes, who had just founded St. John's College, Fordham, recognizing the high scholarship of the young pastor of St. Joseph's, made Father McCloskey President of that institution, which remained at St. John's a short time and then returned to his old pastoral charge. On November 23, 1849, Father McCloskey was appointed Coadjutor Bishop of New York. On the 10th day of March, 1854, just ten years after his ordination, the young priest again stood at the altar in St. Patrick's, where he was ordained to the Episcopate. Three years later Bishop McCloskey became First Bishop of Albany on the division of the diocese of New York. For seventeen years he administered the affairs of the Albany diocese. His executive ability was markedly shown in the splendid organization of the diocese through the interior of the State. Churches and Cathedrals were erected in all the towns and cities, charitable works were organized, and the diocese was made a model of religious and social institutions made its power felt on all sides. The building up of the Troy Theological Seminary was another labor of love with the Bishop. Archbishop Hughes went to Europe in company with Thurloe Weed on his patriotic mission for the purpose of securing the aid of foreign powers in behalf of the South. In his absence Bishop McCloskey administered the affairs of the diocese with tact and wisdom. On the 6th of May, 1864, just thirty years after his ordination to the priesthood, and twenty years from the time he was ordained Bishop, John McCloskey was made Archbishop of New York. The history of the administration of the archdiocese was almost a repetition of that as Bishop of Albany. The same ability for organization was felt in churches, schools, and charities. The building of the great cathedral in New York, from its inception to its completion, he gave devoted attention. The cost of the building fund he gave $10,000 from his private purse, and some of the largest subscriptions came from his personal friends. March 18, 1870, eleven years after he was made Archbishop, thirty-two years from the time he was ordained Bishop, forty-two years from the time he was ordained priest, he was elected to the See of Baltimore. A brief message to John McCloskey, congratulating him on his election that day by the Consistory held in the Vatican, and a Cardinal of the Church of Rome. His Cardinalate was marked by few important events. He was a member of the College of Cardinals, and elected successor to Pius IX., and the dedication of the new St. Peter's Cathedral also marked his administration.

Riotous Street Car Employees.

St. Louis, Mo., October 9.—About noon the street railway strikers began to assemble in knots in various parts of the city and things presented an ominous appearance. First a riot occurred on Chouteau-avenue road and several cars were dumped into the gutter, and the drivers and conductors were severely handled. Next a big crowd of strikers attacked several cars of the Union Depot line on the Twelfth-street Bridge, within a few minutes the Four Courts and police headquarters. The drivers and conductors were badly beaten, one conductor being rendered insensible. The rioters were in such a hurry to tip over the cars that the passengers were not allowed time to get out of them, and two ladies were badly injured on the Twelfth street bridge while leaping from a car which the strikers had already tilted in the air. At three o'clock a riot occurred on Stockton-avenue. One of the cars of the Union Depot line was coming up the avenue in charge of Policemen Griffith and Hanson, and when near Hickory street it was surrounded by some fifty men, who began striking the horses and making other demonstrations. The officers twice ordered the men to desist, but they paid no attention to the command, and assaulted the officers with sticks and rocks. Hanson was struck with a rock and Griffith was knocked down by a man named John Haney. While the latter was beating Griffith, Hanson drew his revolver and shot him in the head, killing him. The body of Haney was taken to the morgue, and Hanson was taken to quarters and reported the affair, and was placed in arrest.

Militant Still Captured.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., October 9.—In Alfred Susquehanna County, on Tuesday, the place of Stephen Tiffany was raided by Government officers, and a complete distillery, with two thousand gallons of contraband spirits, was discovered and seized. Tiffany was arrested yesterday. W. Chandler of Gibson, in the same county, a saloon-keeper, was arrested as an accessory, and four hundred gallons of spirits found in his place. The operations of the moonshiners have been very extensive for a few years past. It is expected that other arrests will follow.

Mother and Child Drowned.

St. Paul, Minn., October 9.—While passing through the rapids in the Chetels River, Washington Territory, a small boat containing Mrs. A. N. Cunningham, J. H. Fairchild, W. A. Hu chins, wife and child, capsized. Mrs. Hu chins and child were drowned, but the others were rescued with great difficulty. When taken ashore they were nearly dead. The bodies of the woman and child were recovered.

A Boy Ground to Pieces.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., October 9.—At the Luke Fiddies breaker to-day a Polish boy employed as a slate picker missed his footing and fell headlong into a box in which were swiftly revolving a pair of "monkey" rollers used in preparing the smaller sizes of coal. Before the machinery could be stopped his body was ground to pieces.

Diver Refused Both.

CONCORD, N. H., October 9.—In the cross-actions for divorce between George P. Rowell, the well known advertising agent, and his wife, of Lancaster, Chief Justice Doe, of the Supreme Court, has refused his decision, refusing to grant the application to either party.

Diseased Horses Shot.

TUSCOGA, Ill., October 8.—Glanders among horses made its appearance in this county. The State Veterinary Surgeon made an examination of the horses affected with that disease. All his horses were accordingly shot.

BLACK CHOLERA.

A Fishing Vessel Supposed to Have Brought it Over From Spain.

HALIFAX, N. S., October 7.—Huntsville, a little fishing hamlet of about two thousand people, located forty miles from here by rail, has been suffering from the "black cholera" apparently in its worst form the past six weeks. It seems that Captain Hunter, who commands the fishing smack Eliza Ann, was taken suddenly and mysteriously ill in the latter days of August. His malady puzzled the village physicians sorely. They had two consultations, but did not fully make up their minds what the disease was until after Captain Hunter's death, which occurred within forty-eight hours of the time he was taken ill. Half an hour after he died Captain Hunter's body began to turn, and in a short time was a dark-blue all over. Then a horrible odor came from the corpse. By this time the doctors agreed that "black cholera" had been his fatal trouble. Notwithstanding this, however, they did not want to communicate their discovery to the townspeople for fear it would frighten them too badly. It was only a few days before Mrs. Hunter and her daughter, Phoebe, were taken sick, and they died. Then it was that the people first heard of Captain Hunter's death. His body had been buried quietly by the physicians before any of the neighbors knew even that he was dead. After the death of the other members of the family it was decided to conceal the presence of the black cholera for fear that the fishing vessels which cruise the Bay of Fundy and frequently stop at Huntsville, and the trade would be driven elsewhere. So it was that the disease was allowed to feed and spread until now a case has appeared at Windsor, a large town near this city, and this afternoon it was rumored that one had been reported in Halifax itself. There have been thirty-two deaths from the "black cholera" in Huntsville since September 1, and it is feared that the disease is being conveyed to other points by the fishing craft, just as Captain Hunter took it there. Where he got it nobody has any idea except the half-witted mate, from whom it was gleaned that the captain had been aboard a raking Spanish craft just from his home port. There is no doubt that the number of cases is rapidly increasing, and that the disease will commit terrible ravages on the Western Peninsula unless rapid measures are taken to stamp it out. The people of that section are very hard to deal with in any such trouble, for they do not understand the value of sanitary restrictions, and will take every possible means to evade them. It is always fatal in forty-eight hours, and frequently on the same day. Almost immediately after death the body turns black, emits a horrible stench, and has a black spot along the back. There is considerable alarm felt all along the peninsula among people intelligent enough to understand the horrible malady.

Sending Messages from Trains.

MILWAUKEE, October 8.—C. H. Haskins returned from a trip to New York, where he went to make arrangements for experiments in railroad telegraphy in this city. These experiments, which have been in contemplation for several months, will take place between moving cars on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroads, and will be conducted by Thomas A. Edison, the noted inventor, and Mr. Gilliland, the chief electrician of the Bell Telephone Company. Mr. Haskins said to a reporter to-day that his invention has recently been working on his invention for telegraphing between moving trains, and has perfected it so that all that will be necessary in the way of preparation will be to fasten his appliances to the interior of the cars, and to have telegraphic communication. Experiments will be made this week on an Eastern railroad, and the experiments will be made in Milwaukee in the course of ten days.

Street Cars Wrecked.

St. Louis, October 8.—About 4:30 p. m. a crowd congregated between Seventh and Eighth, on Pine street, and commenced unloading the horses from the cars of the Union depot line. After this was accomplished they turned a car crosswise of the track, and then backing another and another up the hill, pushed them rapidly down hill until they would strike the crosswise car. This was continued until seven cars were piled up together, forming a complete barricade. A tremendous crowd gathered quickly, and a fight was started, in which an unknown "scab" was stabbed with a clasp knife. By this time the police were on the ground, and after sending the crowd to the dispersal dispersed the crowd. Several arrests were made, but the matter is so confused it is hard to say who did the stabbing. The cars upon the embankment lines were all withdrawn at 6 o'clock, and no attempt was made to run cars to-night.

Death After a Fast of Fifty-Days.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., October 8.—Mrs. Veronica Bull, who performed a remarkable fast in this city, died this morning. Her fast began on August 10, fifty-nine days ago, and since that time she did not touch a morsel of solid food, living entirely upon water, in which small quantities of morphine were dissolved. When taken to the clinic to partake of food she weighed 140 pounds. As she lay upon a couch this morning her bones nearly protruded through the skin, which lay in wrinkles, and her eyes were terribly sunken. Since the death of her husband, eight years ago, in an insane asylum, her mind was affected. A post-mortem examination was held this afternoon.

Small Coins.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—Some time ago the coinage of five-cent pieces and pennies was suspended because the Treasury had on hand about $800,000 in the coins. Complaints were made of the scarcity of these minor coins. They can be obtained here or at the various sub-treasuries in exchange for lawful money. The express charges, however, must be borne by those receiving the coins. This charge in part explains the scarcity.

Battle in Madagascar.

PARIS, October 9.—The War Office received a dispatch to-day, dated Tamatave, from Admiral Mitot, commander of the French forces in Madagascar, stating that the French and Hovas had an indecisive fight on the 26th of September at Passanavoa Bay. The French lost twenty-one killed and wounded, and the Hovas two hundred. The French fleet has blockaded the port of Natamandry. Admiral Mitot has proceeded to Majung.

A Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, October 9.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number: For the United States, 185; for Canada, 22; or a total of 207, as against 196 last week and 185 the week previous. The increase is in the Pacific and Western States.

Two Blasted Lives.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., October 9.—Some weeks ago Clarence Clark, formerly a wealthy druggist, committed suicide yesterday afternoon. His wife took poison and died. Mrs. Clark was a member of one of the most respectable families in this State, and formerly lived in Wilkesbarre, where she was a general favorite in society.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Three Thousand Dervishes Killed in Battle.

PARIS, October 7.—A dispatch from Philippopolis to the Temps says the Mayor has caused placards to be posted throughout the city announcing that, in view of the wishes of the Foreign Ambassadors to Turkey, the Sultan has accepted the union of Bulgaria and Roumelia, under the rule of Prince Alexander.

BERLIN, October 7.—King Milan, at a meeting of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, declared that in the event of the union between Bulgaria and Roumelia being accepted by the Powers, Servia would fight unless her demands for an extension of territory were granted.

CAIRO, October 7.—Official advices have been received from Ras Alula, the commander of the Abyssinian expedition, marching to the relief of the beleaguered garrison at Kassala, to the effect that after a severe battle the Abyssinians defeated a large force of Dervishes under Osman Digna, and that three thousand Dervishes were killed in the encounter. The Abyssinian General is now rapidly advancing on Kassala.

BERLIN, October 7.—Germany has dispatched a note to the Court of Spain, rejecting Spain's claims to the Caroline.

Terrible Experience at Sea.

NEW YORK, October 7.—Captain Anglio, and thirteen officers and seamen of the wrecked Italian bark Talamano arrived here yesterday on the German bark Louisa and Augusta, by which they were rescued about 750 miles east of Sandy Hook on September 23. Captain Anglio said yesterday at the Italian Consul's office: "We were forty-eight days out from Pensacola, bound to Fort Glasgow, England, and on September 23 the bark sprung a leak. We managed to keep the vessel comparatively free from water until the encounter with the Dervishes in a revolving hurricane or cyclone. The outburst of wind were frightful, and came from all points of the compass. The sea rose to a fearful height, so that we were unable to keep the vessel steady. Our masts were twisted out, but feared that we should be swamped by the sea. The leak increased, and for forty-eight hours the men worked at the pumps to keep the vessel afloat. While the vessel was being swept the length of the deck, threatening to carry everything before them. Finally the gale broke, but our vessel was in a sinking condition and our only hope was being rescued. The bark Louisa and Augusta was sighted about 9 a. m. last Tuesday and she answered our signal of distress. At noon she was only about two hundred feet from us, but the weather was so rough we could not attempt to make contact. We were rescued and as our only alternative was to attempt to rescue ourselves, we put off in our long boat and in a few moments were on deck of the German bark. Our own vessel was a perfect wreck, and was only kept afloat by her cargo of lumber."

Cost of General Grant's Funeral.

PHILADELPHIA, October 8.—At the second day's session of the National Convention of Funeral Directors the President presented Stephen Merritt, of New York, who buried General Grant. Mr. Merritt made an address on the beauties of the undertaking business. He said that he had been asked to talk about his bill for the Grant funeral. People said it was $50,000, but the sum really was just $14,168, and he had not been paid yet, though the bill has been audited and sent to Washington. At the afternoon session of the convention the following were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, H. Samson, of Pittsburgh; Vice-Presidents, E. Erswell, of Alabama; John H. Newman, of Brooklyn; J. B. McIntyre, of Ontario; Horace B. Edwards, of Providence; D. A. Baxter, of Illinois; Secretary, A. B. Perigo, of Illinois; Corresponding Secretary, T. H. Roberts, of Detroit; Treasurer, Chas. A. Miller, of Cincinnati. The convention adjourned to meet in Cleveland on the second Wednesday of September, 1890.

An Extraordinary Calf-Stealing Case.

WATERLOO, Ia., October 7.—The lawsuit known as the "Jones Calf case" has been concluded. It was an action brought by Robert Johnson against E. V. Miller and six other defendants for $10,000 for malicious prosecution in a calf-stealing case. The case has been before the courts since 1877, and has been tried five times. The jury found for the plaintiff and awarded a verdict running from $8,000 to $7,500. The jury in this instance have awarded $7,000. The costs, attorneys' fees and expenses entailed upon all parties, including the cost of the trial, were $10,000. The case is estimated at over $20,000, and several prosperous farmers have been rendered bankrupt, while the calves in the first place were not worth over $50.

Greatest Day Pittsburgh Ever Saw.

PITTSBURGH, October 7.—This has been the biggest day in Pittsburgh's history, marking the completion and opening of the Davis Island Dam, the construction of which was begun by the city of Pittsburgh in 1877, and which cost $2,000,000. Fifty thousand strangers are here from abroad to witness the ceremonies. A procession of fifty steamboats, gaily decked with flags and streamers, left the Monongahela river for the dam. During the celebration to-day, by the premature discharge of a cannon, John R. Rammer for Battery B, had both arms torn from his shoulders, and is fatally injured. Mrs. Mary M. Rammer, who had her hip broken by the flying ramrod.

Funeral of a Philanthropist.

LONDON, October 8.—The funeral of the Earl of Shaftesbury took place to-day. Religious services over the remains were conducted at Westminster Abbey. Hundreds of poor people stood outside the abbey in a dreary rain during the entire services, being unable to get into the sacred edifice, so dense was the crowd. The Earl was buried in the abbey. A large number of shoeblacks with crapes on their arms, and many other boys who had been benefited by the charitable acts of the Earl, stood in line with the elite in the abbey. The services were very impressive.

Regarding Bounty Money.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—Acting Secretary Comptroller McMahon has made a ruling that bounty can not be allowed in the case of any volunteer soldier who enlisted after April 30, 1865, unless upon proof derived from the records that notice of the telegram from the Provost Marshal's office to all officers in command in the insurrectionary States, dated April 22, 1865, directing that no bounties be allowed or paid for any volunteers enlisted after that date, was actually not received at the place of enlistment. A large number of colored volunteer troops enrolled in the Southern States about April 30, 1865, are affected by this decision.

Monster Fire in London.

LONDON, October 8.—A fire broke out at five o'clock this morning in the Charter House buildings, a row of thirteen eight-story warehouses, on Aldersgate street. In a few hours the whole of the buildings, including their contents, were almost totally destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The row was mostly occupied by fancy goods dealers, furriers, toy stores and printing offices. One bank was also in the buildings. This institution was the only one that escaped being burned completely out. It was badly damaged, but not destroyed. The damage is estimated at $3,000,000.

Singular Hindoo Outrage.

The police at Hyderabad have succeeded in arresting four Pariahs charged with desecrating graves on a large scale for a singular superstitious purpose. The graves of children freshly buried were the special objects of their operations. The head of the band, a Poojari named Appawoo, used to cut the large blood-vessels connected with the head and neck of the disinterred children, and subsequently employed them in the confecting of an ointment which, he told his dupes, when applied to the eyelids, conferred the power of seeing hidden treasures. The detection of the ruffians was caused by the visit one night of a mother to the grave of her child, buried only that day. She surprised them at their work, and at once brought the police.—St. James' Gazette.

In an unfrequented and almost inaccessible spot on the Navajo Indian reservation, in a wild locality seldom trod by the feet of civilized men, a stone monument, erected by United States surveyors, marks a most important spot. That monument stands on the corners of the State of Colorado and the Territories of Utah, Arizona and New Mexico, and is the only place in the United States where a person can stand with his hands and feet in four different political divisions.—Salt Lake Tribune.

The address that Arabs place on letters is very long and very pious. Here is one on a letter sent to a writer in the Berlin Tagblatt: "In the name of the merciful God, the beneficent. This writing is from one who serves his Lord, from X, the son of X; and if God wills it will get into the hands of our friend Sidi Musa, the son of Hamdalla, the Prussian, the Christian, in the city of Tharabolos, Tripoli, the illustrious, the famous."

Two tiny boys with good voices and clever mimicry have been singing on Western railroad trains. They said to sympathetic questioners that they were working their way from San Francisco to this city, and one passenger estimated their receipts in a single day at $40. He also discovered that they had a manager and treasurer in the person of their father, to whom they ally rendered up the money.—Chicago Herald.

A new hobby-horse has been devised for boys. It consists of the model of a horse mounted on a tricycle. It is driven by means of the forward wheel, as in the case of an ordinary tricycle, the steering handle appearing above the horse's neck, about where the bridle should be held. Motion is given to the horse's legs by cranks connected with the wheels.—Chicago Times.

TWO NOTED MINSTRELS.

Who Have Won Fortunes and What They Say About Stage Life.

"Billy" Emerson has recently made a phenomenal success in Australia, and is rich. Emerson was born in Belfast in 1846. He began his career with Joe Sweeney's minstrels in Washington in 1867. Later on he jumped into prominence in connection with Newcomb's minstrels with whom he visited Germany. He visited Australia in 1874 and on his return to America joined Haverley's minstrels in San Francisco at $500 a week and expenses. With this troupe he played before her majesty, the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and royalty generally. After this trip he leased the Standard theater, San Francisco, where for three years he did the largest business ever known to minstrelsy. In April last he went to Australia again, where he has "beaten the record."

"Billy" is a very handsome fellow, an excellent singer, dances gracefully, and is a true humorist. "Yes, I have traveled all over the world, have met all sorts of people, come in contact with all sorts of customs, and had all sorts of experiences. One must have a constitution like a locomotive to stand it. I know I seem to bear it like a major and I do, but I tell you candidly that with the perpetual change of diet, water and climate, if I had not maintained my vigor with regular use of Warner's Safe Cure I should have gone under long ago."

George H. Primrose, whose name is known in every amusement circle in America, is even more emphatic, if possible, than "Billy" Emerson, in commendation of the same article to sporting and traveling men generally, among whom it is a great favorite. Emerson has grown rich on the boards and so has Primrose because they have not squandered the public's "favors."

"CAN you tell me what a smile is, little maiden?" "Yes, sir; it's the whisper of a laugh."—Golden Days.

$500 Not Called For. It seems strange that it is necessary to persuade men that you can cure their diseases by offering a premium to the man who fails to receive benefit. And yet Dr. Sage undoubtedly cured thousands of cases of obstinate catarrh with his "Catarrh Remedy," who would never have applied to him, if it had not been for his offer of the above sum for an incurable case. Who is the next bidder for cure or cash?
